CompleWare® Corporation Announces Addition of Video Studio

Iowa City, Iowa – February 8, 2006 – CompleWare Corporation, a leading provider of software and data capture services for the pharmaceutical industry, has recently added a state-of-the-art video studio to their worldwide headquarters in North Liberty, Iowa.

“The video studio is a unique facility which broadcasts high definition television and it will allow us to produce videos for training purposes,” said John Weiler, M.D., president of CompleWare Corporation.

In addition, CompleWare will be able to use streaming video to train off-site staff.

“This is an exciting opportunity for us to deliver real-time streaming video to our customers using state-of-the-art digital video technologies,” said Ben Galey, Network Manager. “Webcasts [streaming video] can be broadcast to multiple sites at high resolution providing an excellent multimedia experience. “

The video studio will allow for easy set up of multiple sets, multiple camera angles and nearly unlimited lighting options.

Key components of the new studio include the following: 22 professional studio lights, a dimmer lighting console, 3 cameras with rolling tripod or fixed elevated options, high definition video capabilities, 2 teleprompters, 360 degree blue chromakey curtain, professional quality audio and video editing suite, streaming audio and video capabilities, large garage-door access to room, acoustic isolation, carpeted or concrete floor options and unlimited set environments.
